

The Jerry Tachoir Group

The Jerry Tachoir Group is a contemporary jazz ensemble led by vibraphonist and marimbist Jerry Tachoir, based in Hendersonville, Tennessee. Since its founding, the group has carved out a distinctive niche by placing the vibraphone—an instrument rarely featured as a band leader’s voice—in the forefront of their sound. International Musician+2Nashville Musicians Association+2 With a roster including Jerry’s wife, composer/keyboardist/voice-artist Marlène Tachoir, bassist Roy Vogt and drummer(s) such as Danny Gottlieb or Rich Adams, the ensemble delivers original compositions spanning Latin, acoustic and electric jazz styles. Nashville Musicians Association+1 Their touring schedule has taken them across the United States, Canada and Europe—with appearances at major festivals like the Montreux Jazz Festival and the North Sea Jazz Festival—a testament to their reach and artistry. Bergerault Percussions In addition to recording albums (such as Stories) and performing live, the group is deeply involved in education: Jerry Tachoir is a well-known clinician, author of mallet percussion method books, and integrates his expertise into the group’s ethos. Overall, the Jerry Tachoir Group stands out for its high level of musicianship, its unusual instrumentation, and its blending of jazz traditions with innovative mallet-instrument leadership.

Tachoir Music has been described as - “Highly original music with dazzling improvisations by virtuoso musicians” - The Times
